The MissData conference will focus on the challenging problems related to dealing with missing values and matrix completion. It will be held in Rennes (France) on June 18-19, 2015.

Pre-conference tutorials will take place on Wednesday afternoon 17 June.

This conference will present the state of the art of the methods and software available to address these issues and discuss new theoritical and practical challenges posed by modern data which are increasingly complex. Applications in many fields will be presented from clinical trials to social-sciences.

This event will be an event of the Data Mining and Learning group of the French Statistical Society
