As part of a programme of major growth, the School of Mathematics at the University of Edinburgh is advertising lectureships in the Mathematics of Data Science and in Operational Research. We are looking for candidates of outstanding talent or potential who will contribute significantly to activity in these areas, and to our flourishing suite of MSc programmes (in areas including OR).

This is an exciting time for the School, as a partner in a consortium that will lead the UK's Alan Turing Institute. Candidates with relevant interests are encouraged.
